Dear Friends:

It is my pleasure to extend best wishes to the New American Voters Association for its 17th Annual Dinner-Dance event. I would also like to thank President Dilip Nath and all the respected members for their leadership. Your continued dedication and meaningful efforts are an inspiration to us all.

The contributions of the immigrant community to New York City and our nation are extraordinary. They have made valuable contributions to all sectors of American society, i.e., medicine, law, business, education, technology, government, military service, setting fine examples of model citizens and public servants. It is crucial that we bring them closer to the political process to hear their voices and ensure our government works for everyone. For many years, NAVA has provided public service to empower the immigrant community, through various advocacy efforts and events, such as voter registration drives and workshops. Tonight's event will honor several distinguished leaders who share the same commitment. Congratulations to all the honorees!

On behalf of the more than 780,000 residents of the Fifth Congressional District of New York, I commend the New American Voters Association and honorees for their outstanding contributions and efforts to uplift our brothers and sisters in the communities across New York.

With warmest regards, I am

HONOREE

HONORABLE JOHN C. LIU

John C. Liu is a New York State Senator representing a broad area of northeast Queens. He is chairperson of the Senate's committee on New York City Education and also serves on the committees of Education, Finance, Higher Education, Judiciary, Rules and Transportation. John was Comptroller of the City of New York (2010-2013) and a New York City Councilmember (2002-2009). In 2013, John was a candidate for Mayor of New York City, in lieu of running for re-election as Comptroller. Currently, John teaches municipal finance and public policy in Masters programs at the City University of New York (CUNY) and Columbia University.

The 43rd Comptroller of New York City, John Liu established an impressive record as the chief financial officer for 8.4 million residents and overseeing municipal government with an annual budget of $70 billion. John saved taxpayers $5 billion through rigorous audits of City agencies, detailed scrutiny of contracts with private companies, and refinancing of $20 billion of outstanding City bond debt. During his four-year term of office, he achieved an enviable total investment return, increasing the City's pension asset portfolio to $150 billion. John created the nationally acclaimed online application "CheckbookNYC.com" providing unprecedented transparency in government spending. He facilitated economic development and new job creation with acceleration of City capital projects, capturing low interest rates in the bond markets.

Always emphasizing that "it's not just about numbers, it's about people," John Liu championed fairness and equality. An early and staunch opponent of stop-and-frisk tactics, John highlighted the risks to communities and taxpayers alike due to damaged police-community relations. John presented daily-updated M/WBE Report Cards for City agencies to monitor and encourage greater government contracting opportunities for minority entrepreneurs. John also proposed sound economic policies to create real economic growth and narrow the ever-widening wealth gap, protected wage standards and recouped back wages and fines on behalf of cheated workers from contractors who just don't want to play by the rules, and exposed the billions of dollars in publicly-subsidized corporate welfare doled out by the City that failed to deliver on promised new jobs and fair housing. He published numerous reports analyzing and issuing recommendations on a wide range of public priorities, including education and the need to take students beyond high school, affordable housing and family support, retirement security and protection of pension benefits, and the fiscal and social benefits of legalizing marijuana. As a member of the New York City Council, John Liu represented his hometown of Flushing and northeast Queens. He secured millions of dollars in additional funding for schools, libraries, parks, senior citizen centers, and youth programs. John served as chairperson of the Council's Transportation Committee overseeing operations of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, Department of Transportation, and Taxi and Limousine Commission, and enacted legislation boosting efficiency and efficacy of key

John also served on the committees on Education, Consumer Affairs, Contracts, Oversight & Investigation, Land Use, Lower Manhattan Redevelopment and Health.

John's significant accomplishments as a legislator included exposing financial irregularities at the MTA, enacting legislation like the Equal Access Bill mandating on-demand language services in health and human services agencies, the School Zone Engine Idling Bill limiting engine idling near schools, and the Dignity for All Schools Act requiring the Department of Education to track bullying and harassment in schools. John used his office to fight hate and bigotry, and in too many instances denounced violence against immigrant workers such as restaurant delivery workers. John's battles with radio shock-jocks and their corporate sponsors successfully brought an end to extreme racist and misogynist broadcasts in the New York market.

Hailed as a "Trailblazer" and "Pioneer," John Liu's historic elections – as the first Asian American to win legislative office in New York and then the first to win citywide office – were milestones for Asian Americans in New York and across the nation. Although he wishes Asian Americans had been elected long before, John is honored to be the first and embraces the opportunity to broaden representation and public service.

Prior to being elected to office, John worked in the private sector for 14 years as a professional actuary, most recently as a manager at PricewaterhouseCoopers. John has drawn upon his real world fiscal expertise to root out waste and mismanagement in government. John Liu immigrated from Taiwan at the age of five. He was educated in New York public schools, including Hunter College High School, Bronx High School of Science, and Binghamton University, attaining his degree in Mathematical Physics. John lives in Flushing with his wife Jenny and their son Joey

Crowley also supported major land-use and zoning amendments allowing for major expansions including Hudson Yards and Midtown East. Prior to joining BTEA, Crowley was a board chair and co-founder of a non-profit group "21 in 21" — renamed "The New Majority." Before her election to the NYC Council, Crowley worked in the construction industry as a decorative painter with District Council 9 on landmark restorations including Radio City Music Hall, the Central Synagogue and St. Patrick's Cathedral. She also spent years managing workforce and education programs that trained union members and workers throughout the diverse communities of NYC.
